DIAMONDS IN THE MINES

Lyrics by Tony Barlow

TONY BARLOW

It's another late night in the city, all the people are hurrying by
As they step out into the evening air beneath the starry, starry sky
He ain't got any plans tonight, no place he's really got to go
She's wondering what she's going to do tonight
Maybe go downtown and catch a late-night picture show

They're both strangers to the city lights
Walking beneath those flashing neon signs
Just looking at the sights, just looking at the lights
Shining like diamonds in the mines

Now he's sitting down in a barroom
Watching all the people come and go
As that old jukebox in the corner
Starts to play all the songs he used to know

And as she walks into the barroom, all dressed up just like the night
As he turns around, all he can hear is his heart pound
All he can see is her love light

Yes, somewhere in the city tonight
Beneath those barroom flashing neon signs
They're starting to relight as they go dancing through the night
All the diamonds in their mines

Now they're back in his hotel room
And as he fixes them something to eat
She's leaning out of the window
Listening to all the sounds and songs of the street

And as he puts on an old record
As they drink a toast to each other's company
Just for a moment they let themselves get lost
Inside that downtown jazzman's melody

And love tonight, oh baby, you know
It was the last thing they thought they'd find
It was going to be another night
'Neath a cold city light
That can sometimes treat you so unkind

But somewhere in the city tonight
Beneath those downtown flashing love-light signs
They're starting to relight as they go dancing through the night
All the diamonds in their mines

Yes, somewhere in the city tonight
Like the stars they sparkle and they shine
As they start to relight as they go dancing through the night
All the diamonds in their mines

Yes, somewhere in the city tonight
Filled with all God's rhythms and rhymes
They're showing each other as they go deep undercover
All the diamonds in their mines

Yes, somewhere in the city tonight
Like the stars they sparkle and they shine
As they show each other as they go deep undercover
All the diamonds in their mines
